About the Scholarship Program

The State of Texas, Education in Texas and the Texas Freemasons share a rich history. Early settlers of the wilderness that would become known as Texas included families whose members were committed to the principles of Freemasonry.

Freemasons played a key role in gaining independence from Mexico. General Sam Houston led the Texas army to victory at San Jacinto. As President of the fledgling Republic, he presided over the meeting in Houston when the Grand Lodge of Texas was formed. Anson Jones, the first Master of a Texas Lodge, was elected first Master of the new Masonic Grand Lodge, and would eventually serve as President of the Republic. The three Masonic Lodges which formed the Grand Lodge in 1837 have today grown to well over nine hundred lodges all across our vast state. Freemasons played important roles in the creation of our Republic, which became the Great State of Texas as well as serving as civic leaders and citizens in the formation and growth of towns and cities all over the state of Texas.

Texas Freemasons even played an important role in the establishment of public education in Texas, which has benefitted generations of Texans. As individuals and as members of the fraternity, Masons were influential and instrumental in the establishment of a strong public education system. Mirabeau B. Lamar, a Freemason and the second President of the Republic of Texas, is remembered as the founder of the Texas Public Schools and the "Father of Education in Texas." Lamar's views regarding education are clearly reflected in his statement, "The cultivated mind is the guardian genius of democracy." This statement was adopted as the motto for The University of Texas.

In the early days of the Republic when a Masonic Lodge was built in a community, it was usually a two-story structure. The building was designed to provide a lodge meeting room upstairs and a schoolroom for the children of the community downstairs. Masons provided the physical space for the school and, in many instances, paid all or part of the teachers' salaries.

In 1848, it was determined that ten percent of the revenue of Grand Lodge be appropriated to support public schools. Today, the Masonic Grand Lodge of Texas continues to support public schools through various scholarships and programs designed to cultivate the minds of future Texans.

Austin Lodge No. 12, A.F. & A.M., was set to work on November 7, 1839 and continues its support in this mission by offering scholarships to assist in the pursuit of learning through the establishment of a special endowment - the Ziller Fund.
